

DOMESTIC VIOLENCE AND COMMUNITY PROBLEM SOLVING

OVERVIEW

Domestic violence is recognised as a significant and serious issue in our communities. There are many examples of how communities are endeavouring to reduce the incidence and effects of domestic violence. In this seminar, participants will seek to introduce a problem solving approach which will enable people to formulate appropriate individual or partnership responses to domestic violence.

OUTLINE OF THIS SEMINAR

This seminar will:

- Define domestic violence
- Define and understand a community problem approach
- Identify sources of information in your community
- Understand reporting issues and limitations of data
- Workshop examples of how a problem solving approach can be applied to examples from your community

WHO BENEFITS?

The seminar is designed for those practitioners working in the domestic violence field. The problem solving approach will give them some structure to apply to decision making. The approach would enhance report writing and development of recommendations for their organisation.
